

It saves time

Extra work now by an individual (you) will save a group of people (the cast and crew) a lot of time and effort later. For instance:

- You easily select audition material.
- You distribute audition material in both digital & analog formats.
- Stage manager quickly makes a production script.
- People new to auditions readily understand the script.
- Cast gets a script with room for blocking and notes.

When you pull out scenes for future auditions, they'll contain only the essential information. Too often in auditions the acting notes from a script limit the actor's work. With you supplying a character profile and a short back-story paragraph, the actor should have everything needed to breathe life into the part.